

If you or someone you know is the victim of domestic violence you can find help by calling the National Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-799-7233 or by visiting their website. You can also find valuable information at the National Resource Center on Domestic Violence.

They say that home is where the heart is, but for victims of intimate partner violence, or IPV, home can be a terrifying place. When you find yourself living with a partner that is violent. Unfortunately, the entanglement goes deep if the relationship sustains by many years, and those entanglement becomes in barriers to surpass to leave behind. Those barriers can be economical, psychological, or even ideological.

It is important to know there are instances where you can go and ask for advices, they can connect you with a wide net that can support to surpass one by one those barriers. You are not alone. We know is not that easy to get to the door and be ready to go through the process.

Finances the painful attachment to your abuser.

It is pretty common for the abusers to use the personal finances against their partners. It is because is so dangerous the tendency of the young of attach themselves to older partners that buy their company for access to a new economical level. This is opening the door to increase the number of people who engaged for their finances to painful relationships. The control over someone's economic wellbeing is an extremely effective way to prevent them from leaving an abusive relationship.

This entanglement is one of the most difficult to surpass and can be dangerous to untangle. In this time where a great part of the finances can be managed through digital and online mediums. This can help the abuser to take over the whole control of the victim's accounts. You can ask for help of freefrom.org or National Domestic Violence Hotline that can help you to get a lawyer that can advice how to get the financial freedom from your abuser.

Your rights at home.

One danger that hold the victim if they leave the house there is high probability that doesn't has nowhere to go. One good news is the law is at their side and keep you in the house, the abusers use myths and outright lies about victim's rights that make it appear they have no choice when there is plenty.

It is not your fault.

The shame of living this situation is one of the most horrific feelings, the people tend to isolate themselves and cut their own path to their support networks for help. This feeling increases through the cycle of going out and in of the relationship that some victims do. It is important to leave the victims know is not their fault, and the doors will be open always for them.