

The ugly turn to left of Hispanic America

The 21st century had happened a rapid succession of leftwing forcing their wins through the elections in the countries in Hispanic American Region. After the fall of the Berlin's wall the sensation of the left dying was remarkable. And the rightwing committed the mistake of forgetting about them.

The Sao Paulo forum raised and they determined a long-term plan to take over the region and the fruits of those plan are having fruit in the last decade where the take over the education, the mass media and the literature.

The 1st step occurred in 1998 with the election of president Hugo Chavez and the 2nd step was the 1999-2000 election of president Ricardo Lagos, who led the Partido Socialista de Chile (Socialist Party of Chile), the 3rd step was the winning of Luis Inacio 'Lula' da Silva won elections in Brazil 2002 and was re-elected in 2006. The 4th step was the left-wing Peronist leader Nestor Kirchner was elected in 2003, the fifth step was Tabaré Vázquez who led to the victory in Uruguay in 2004. The sixth step is Evo Morales the former coca union leader Evo Morales was elected president of Bolivia, the seventh step is the ticket who took Michelle Bachelet who enforced the path that walked her predecessor. The eighth step occurred in Ecuador with the strange won of Rafael Correa in 2006, the ninth step is Daniel Ortega in Nicaragua who restored himself in the power after a brief period where somebody else took the presidency and he want it again. The tenth step is when Nestor Kirchner passed down the presidency to his wife Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner, the eleventh step was the buying of the liberal president of Honduras called Manuel Zelaya Rosales who was led to turn form a right to left politician, this process was stopped by the last coup of state that happened in the region in 2009.

This event stopped a little bit the cancer of the left in the region by 6 years, where Argentina, Chile, Honduras and Brazil escaped for the tackle committed by the socialism for a brief time, sadly the right-wing politician didn't a good job and those country along with Perú, Colombia and Mexico add to those who fell under the wheels. The case of Honduras is the most tragic of those case where the right-winged political party mount a nasty and horrendous Narco-

The dark future for the region that always suffered high levels of corruption, those combine with ideas that always tend to increase the poverty and dissolved the foundation of the society and substitute them with the nothingness is scary.
